judge said in substance:

There are but two questions to consider in determining this case. One is, whether or not the assessment was levied by competent authority and whether it is excessive. The other is as to whether or not the assessment was equally prorated among the members to cover the losses and expenses of that year. The laws of Nebraska, the articles of incorporation and the by-laws of the company gave the directors of this company full power to fix their own compensation and that of their agents, and while the amount paid out for these purposes may seem large, yet the money was all expended, so far as the evidence shows, in a legitimuse prosecution of the business and the directors did not exceed their authority in expending this money. Taking into consideration the
